He Saw a Burglar Captured When None Had Been.

Yesterday it was reported to the Board of Safety that a burglar with a dark lantern was caught Thursday night in the basement at 471 Broadway, after several shots were fired at him, and that the house breaker was then marched off to the station house by two men. Nothing was known at the station house of the alleged burglar and his

Mrs. William T. Bacon, who lives at the number indicated, denies the whole story. Her husband is a traveling man and was away from home. During the day she and her sons had been talking about burglars.
About 7 o'clock they heard a loud noise in the cellar. Mrs. Bacon says she and her sons investigated and found that some jars had fallen, but everything was locked and nothing was missing. Mrs. Bacon says no burguar was found. The boy who told the story to the clerk of the board insists that he was an eyewitness to the capture of the

One of the features of work in the Charity Organization is the dime savings. This has accomplished great good. There is another feature of the same work which has been undertaken in some of the cities that has worked great change among the school children. This is known as the penny provident fund. The children are encouraged to save their pennies, the teachers become the bankers and take care of the money. An account is kept by the teacher. The money may be withdrawn at any time, but when the money is wanted the teacher must have good reason for its being taken out from the pupil or the parents. The children have saved pennies which otherwise would have been spent for candy or chewing gum and they have become interested in the saving.
When there comes a special need in a family there is a small fund to draw on. If the money is not wanted for any special purpose, such as in case of sickness, to buy medicine, it is used for a new dress, coat or a pair of shoes. There are three times when the money is wanted. Once for a holiwhen the money is wanted. Once for a holi-day excursion in summer, for spring clothes or for presents at Christmas time. In Chi-cago there are many stations of the fund. The bookkeeping is all done at the main of-fice in New York. There are over 325 sta-tions and over twenty-five thousand depos-itors in the United States.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE PANHAN-

The Big Four to Have a Toledo Line-The Pennsylvania Relief Depart-

The stockholders of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis held their annual meeting in Pittsburg yesterday, when the report which was approved by the board of directors on Wednesday was presented and approved. The report shows:

Gross earnings.....$15,439,706 Oper. expenses..... 11,248,545 Inc. 483,025 112,389 Balance $1,556,400 Surplus $1,022,888

Balance $1,022,883 Inc. $846,902 The largest increase was in freight earnings, which showed an increase of $904,226. The passenger business increased $142,012, as compared with the year preceding. The freight tonnage of all lines directly operated by the company increased 2,112,207 tons, or 15 6-10 per cent. There was also a heavy increase in the traffic of the Pittsburg, Chartlers & Youghiogheny, and a marked percentage of increase in that moved over Waynesburg & Washington road. The total tonnage moved upon all lines was 16,522,823, an increase of 2,273,586 tons, or about 16 per cent. The increased mileage was 10.73 per cent. The average rate received upon the main line was the same as during the previous On Thursday he went over the Indianapolis year, being 6.5 mills per ton per mile, but & Vincennes. Mr. Bland is surprised to find the Western lines in so good physical conditions. compared with 1.2 mills the previous year. The average rate per ton per mile on all ines was also the same as 1894, being 6.8 mills, but a like reduction in the cost of movement gave an average profit of 1.7 mills, as against 1.3 mills in the preceding

The number of passengers carried upon the entire system was 7,731,049, an increase over the previous year of 271,781 passengers, or .64 per cent., with an increase in mileage of 7.84 per cent. The average earnings per passenger per mile on the entire system was 2.02 cents, a decrease of .07 cent, while the cost of movement increased .04 cent, the average profit per passenger per mile being reduced to 8.10 of a mill, as compared with 1.9 mills in the preceding year. The track, motive power and equipment were kept in excellent condition, and there was a general improvement in the load per car

The material change in the funded debt however, was in the consolidated mortgage bonds, of which $4,818,000 bearing 41/2 per cent. interest, were refired and canceled by agreement with the holders, and a like number of 4-per-cent. bonds issued in lieu there-of. On Dec. 31, 1895, the total bonds out-standing were $47,621,000, and capital stock, $46,973,906, of which $24,335,127 is common and $22,638,779 preferred. In furtherance of the plan of reorganization of the company 1,728 hares of the common stock of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati & St. Louis railway, having a par value of $35,400, were retired and can-celed during the year.

Voluntary Relief. According to the Panhandle annual report, the employes' voluntary relief department has been a huge success. During the year there were 3,976 accessions to membership, an average of about 306 per month, and 3,571 in excess of the number of deaths and withdrawals. The number of members leaving the service was 1,620, and the total membership at the close of the year was 8.680, a net gain of 1,951, or 28.99 per cent. The amount contributed by the members was $152,132.92; the receipts from interest were $1,474.04, and the amount contributed by the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company was $30,277.89, which, added to the balance on hand at the beginning of the year, viz., $24,177.34, makes a total of $208,062.19. Out of this amount there was paid to families of employes in death benefits and for sickness and accident $138,290.90; and for operating expenses $27,286.49, leaving a balance of $42,484.80, from which should be deducted $29,422.77 to cover the amount of outstanding and unadjusted claims, leaving a surplus of $12,062.03. The amount contributed plus of $12,062.03. The amount contributed to the department by the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company, as stated above, was $30,277.89, of which $27,286.49 was used for the payment of operating expenses of the department and $2,991.40 for payment of extra benefits to mempers whose disabilities had continued over fifty-two weeks and who were therefore no longer entitled to regular benefits from the department. During the year there were 6,416 benefits paid, viz., 6,336 on account of sickness and accident, and eighty Big Four Will Enter Toledo. For some time past the Big Four has been carrying freight from points on its line to Toledo in connection with the Toledo & Ohio Central, and now it is said traffic arrangements are about completed by which passenger and freight trains will be run between Cincinnati and Toledo. The Toledo Blade states that from Cincinnati elegant vestibule trains are to be run over the Big Four to Kenton. Here the train will be taken over the Ohio Central to Toledo. At East Toledo the part of the train will be attached to the Lake Shore and run by the way of the Union Depot to Detroit. If the deal goes through, and there is an excellent prospect of it, within ten days these lines will have one of the fastest northlines will have one of the fastest northand-south trains in the country between least beneficial result will be the restoration of the Big Four to the Ohio Central's interchangeable mileage. According to the Chicago and Ohio river agreement, the Big Four, if it effects the through-car agreement with the Ohio Central, will be entitled to go on the Ohio Central's mileage.

The Big Four and the Ohio Central have already arranged for through freight traffic.
When the May time table goes ito effect
the time of freight trains on both roads will be changed so that there will be no delay at Kenton.

Party Rates and Mileage Books. The lines of the Western Passenger Association met at Chicago yesterday to consider the question of party rates. Some of the roads declared themselves in favor of taking off the rates entirely and others were in favor of allowing them to remain in force as to theatrical and all other kinds of business. The meeting finally adjourned without any definite action being taken, it being understood that another meeting will be called in the near future. The matter of mileage books was also considered and it was de-cided that, in view of the fact that the lines of the Central Passenger Committee had appointed a committee to make a report on this matter by April 23, it would be a good idea for the roads of the Western Passenger Association to take similar action and see if uniformity of action between the Eastern and Western roads could not be secured. The committee was accordingly and cured. The committee was accordingly appointed and will work in conjunction with that of the Central Passenger Committee.

Views of George J. Gould. George J. Gould, who was in Dallas, Tex., yesterday, in an interview on the subjet of railroads, among other things, said: "What we need is some legislation looking to the relief of the railroads. Two-thirds of the railroads of the country are either in the hands of receivers or have recently been reorganized and are trying it again. I attribute this bankruptcy of the railroads of the county almost entirely to the operation of the interstate-commerce law. That law has paralyzed the railroads and they will never prosper again until it is repealed, nor will you see any more roads building while the law is in effect. The laws are too oppressive on invested capital. The repeal of the interstate-commerce law, for instance, would help the country amazingly by permitting existing roads to prosper by encouraging the building of other roads. This would throw life into the railroads and other collateral industries at once.

Official figures show that in March, 1896, there were handled on the Big Four system 127,922 loaded cars, against 143,415 in 1895, against 129,203 in 1894, against 140,060 in 1893, and against 117,813 in 1892. This covers the six years of consolidation of the lines. The tonnage of March, 1896, would probably ceed any former year except March, 1895, for the reason that during the last two years cars of much increased capacity have been

The Erie made a fast run with a special train bearing the New England delegation to the hotel keepers' convention at Los Angeles. The schedule time from Marion, O., to Chicago, was a fraction under fifty-eight miles an hour and the special came into Chicago fully thirty minutes ahead of the time set for its arrival. Most of the fast running was done on the last half of the road, between Marion and Chicago. Three special trains of the hotel keepers went out of Chicago over the Atchison last night. George T. Anderson, late superintendent of the Indiana Car and Foundry Company, yes-terday returned from Boston and brought with him the appointment of superintendent of the Chicago, New York & Boston Refrigerator Company, vice F. W. Brazler, lately appointed general foreman of the car department of the Illinois Central. He will enter upon his duties on Monday next, at Chicago, having charge of all the line cars, as well as extensive shops at Fifty-first street, on the Chicago & Grand Trunk. It is considered one of the most desirable positions of the kind in Chicago, and there were many applicants for the place. Harry Adams owns the St. Paul & South eastern road, which runs from St. Paul, Ind. to his stone quarries. Recently he purchased an engine to do the switching and sent it to the Indiana, Decatur & Western shops to be rebuilt and repainted and named "Flatrock."

R. B. F. Peirce heard of it and instructed the master mechanic to name it "Harry Adams." Shortly before the engine came out of the shops Mr. Adams heard of the order of General Manager Peirce, and went to shops and ordered that the engine be named ice, and people are standing around, Adams says, wondering who R. B. F. Peirce is.

ELUCIDATION AND REVIEW OF IN-TERNATIONAL LESSON, APRIL 12.

Related in Luke xiv, 15-24-The Wide Range of Divine Love.

The Parable of the Great Supper, as

By Rev. JAMES E. GILBERT. Secretary of the American Society of Religious Education.

CONTEXT .- After one Sunday for review and one Sunday for Easter we return to the regular course of the gospel story. Luke alone has sketched the events lying between the lesson of March 22 and the one before us. During that time Jesus wrought two miracles, the healing of a woman on the Sabbath and the healing of a dropsical man. His instructions, delivered partly to disciples and partly to the people, were more extensive. Among the themes treated were these: The effect of Christ's coming, the ignorance of the signs of the times, paying the last mite, the slain Galileans, the parables of the barren fig tree and of the mustard seed, the open gate and the closed door, the choice of the lowest seats and the best guests. These topics show that Jesus was conscious of the approaching end of His career. A few months later He would go up to Jerusalem to the passover, and lay down His life. The thought of this destiny was with Him as He journeyed from place to place, for he frequently made reference to it. (Mark. ix, 12.) The scenes of that awful tragedy cast their shadows over His pathway and yet, without depression of spirits, He moved on, seeking by example and wholesome instruction to prepare His followers for the ordeal through which they must shortly pass.

OCCASION .- While sitting at meat in the house of a Pharisee on the Sabbath day (Ch. xiv. 1). Jesus was speaking on the subject of humility (Verses 7-14), mentioning two instances, somewhat related, a wedding and a feast, in which that excellent virtue might be properly exercised. (Prov. xv, 33.) time thrust in a remark quite foreign to the disease from the system, and the knowing the name or motive of the person and the more one studies his words the greater will be the surprise at the act. It has been suggested that he was called out by something omitted from the narrative. Others think that he was a secret enemy, desiring to entangle Jesus and prepare for the charge of treason, on which He was subsequently arraigned. (Luke xxiii, 2) Some support for this last thought is found in the fact that there were present (Verse 1) those who were watching with an evil eye. It is more probable that the man was a friend, that he believed what he said. He may have reached the conclusion by a series of reflections, pertly upon what had just been spoken, partly upon former utterances of Jesus (Matt. vii, 11), for the address of Christ was so wonderful as to make a deep impression causing a frequent, and wide impression, causing a frequent and wide repetition. A sudden outburst, breaking in upon the Master's teaching, must have awakened surprise.
BLESSEDNESS.—A great truth was tered by this unknown person when he said, "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." The angel declared substantially the same to John in the island of Patmos. (Rev. xix, 9.) The modern church has taken up the expression, giving it a large place in literature. By it believers now understand that communion which they enjoy one with another (I John i, 8), the eating of bread being a symbol of fellowship, and the kingdom of God representing the spiritual household, all of which was included in the celebration of the Lord's Supper in the apostolic church. (I. Cor. x, 16.) But it is not probable that the speaker on this occa-sion had any such lofty ideas. He could not sion had any such lofty ideas. He could not have obtained them from the words of Jesus, who had not yet delivered the parable of the king's son (Matt. xx, 2), or the speech concerning the thrones (Luke xxii, 30), in which such thoughts were involved. Even the apostles held sordid views of the kingdom, as a temporal affair, in which they sought preferment (Luke xx, 24), and were, therefore, incapable of apprehending the higher spiritual enjoyments.

SUPPER.-With a master stroke Jesus turned the man's remark to good account. He did not dilate on the blessedness of guests in His kingdom, which course might have awakened some one's cupidity. Jesus did not seek to win men by promise of gain. (I Tim. vi. 5.) But, what was vastly more important, He showed how unwilling men are apt to accept the benefits of the kingdom. For this purpose, He introduced the parable of the great supper. By that illustration He effected a union between the man's thought and His own prior thought, the act of an adroit teacher. The supper, as described by Jesus, had two features designed to set it forth as an important event in the mind of an Orientalist. There were many guests, and they were invited a considerable time in advance. The numbers indicated the wealth of the host, and the time allowed for preparation indicated that the guests were to be of a high order. This supper represents the plenteous provision made for the souls of men (Zech. x, 17) in the redemption of Christ. (Prov. ix, 1, 2.) The early invitation denotes the promise and prophecies (Isa. xxv. 6) the promise and prophecies (Isa. xxv, made all through the old dispensation, which the people were expected to make ready (Jer. xxxi, 14), and renewed by the calls of John the Baptist and by the early evangelists. (Mark i, 2, 3.)

EXCUSES.—The parable represents that (Psalm x, 13.) To make matters still worse, they presented no apology for delay or any adequate ground for their present desire to avoid the feast. One declared that he must adequate ground for their present desire to avoid the feast. One declared that he must go and see a piece of ground which he had recently purchased, and another pleaded that he must prove a yoke of oxen. Both of these matters might have been delayed without loss. A third urged that, having married, he must remain at home, a foolish pretense. This element of the parable is intended to show how lightly men esteem the things of religion, how easily they thrust aside the most important spiritual concerns for the most trivial temporalities. The carnal mind is at enmity against God. (Rom. viii, 7.) Pride and self-sufficiency are incompatible with the humiliation and faith of the gospel. Inordinate attachment to the objects of this world blinds the eye to the glories of the next world.

GUESTS. — The parable represents that the master of the feast was greatly offended because of the contemptuous conduct of those whom he had invited. Most of them were neighbors, some of them friends, all of them belonging to his rank and station. They had discarded the common courtesies of social life and exposed him to the ridicule of all. He therefore determined to change the character of the feast. Instead of making it a recognition of the more honorable portion of the community, he proposed to convert it into a charity affair. honorable portion of the community, he proposed to convert it into a charity affair. to invite the poor, the maimed, the halt and the blind. Such a feast was by no means common in the pre-Christian centuries, for men had not learned the nobler lessons of disinterested good will toward the unfortunate. But here and there among the Jews, and occasionally also among the heathen, a man would condescend to this praiseworthy act, deriving satisfaction and honor therefrom. By this change in the spirit of the host Jesus intended to illustrate the free grace of God in making you would always be well.

The proclamation of salvation is to all who are in need. (Isa. lv, 1.) Not the phophets only, but Jesus as well (Matt. xi, 28), and the apostles after him (James il, 5), all directed their chief effort and thought toward those who were in trouble.

COMPULSION.—The servant went out int
the streets and lanes of the city bearing to the streets and lanes of the city bearing the new instructions. A glad response might be expected to his invitation. Surely the beggars at the street corners, half-fed and half-clad (Matt. xxvi. 11), could desire nothing more than a table bountifully supplied with food. The maimed and the halt, shunned by all as divinely afflicted, and the blind, popularly esteemed (John ix. 2) to be sinners or the sons of sinners, denied recognition, outcast and forsaken, would regard themselves highly favored by this call to the home of the rich. But even these were measurably indif-ferent when accosted and invited to the supper. The servant returned to say that he had been only partially successful; that, while some came, the guest chamber was not full. It became necessary for the host to resort to the most earnest efforts. "Go out quickly into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in," he said. Use every proper and reasonable method in the most urgent manner to obtain guests. This was the ex-treme aspect of the parable. It showed that men were reluctant to accept Christ, ever when by so doing they might obtain the ver-things which they long most of all to pos-sess. It represented that protracted, diligent (Psalm exxvi, 6) and self-sacrificing effects which ministers must make if they would win the souls of men. (Lam. ill., 48.) REJECTION.—The climax to the parable was reached in the last feature. The content of the feast had been changed. For social recognition of those entitled to it had become a gratuitous of the social recognition. it had become a gratuitous offer to those wh regard for equals and friends it was converted into a display of kindness to inferiors.

And those inferiors were on such a few plane And those inferiors were on such a low plane that they were scarcely able to appreciate the proffered favor. The rich man has gone begging among beggars for guests. Now comes the sequel to the story. The host declares to his servant that, because of the shameful treatment which he has received, none of those will be admitted who were first invited. They were to be totally and permanently excluded (Prov. 1, 24, 25), and that fact was made the ground for urging the servant to diligence. The exclusion of one class made it more necessary to seek another class. Primarily, this part of the narrative refers to the rejection of the Jews, and the bringing in of the gentiles. (Acts xiii, 46.) It is susceptible, however, of a more extended application. All who have heard the gospel and turned a deaf ear may remember that the day of mercy will end, and that a permanent rejection awaits them. (Matt. xxv, 41.)

CONCLUSION.-This parable exhibits the range and intensity of divine love. Begin-ning with the highest and noblest, it sweeps calls of John the Baptist and by the early evangelists. (Mark i, 2, 3.)

EXCUSES.—The parable represents that the persons invited to this supper present ed no plea at first, leaving the impression that they intended to accept. During the days following, while provision was being made by the host, no one declined. At last, when all was ready, the house in order and the feast prepared (Matt. xxii, 4) the servant went forth, saying, "Come." It was then, with one consent, as if there had been a mutual understanding to offer intended insult, that all began to make excuse. (Psalm x, 13.) To make matters still worse. of riches and the allurements of pleasure, He lays upon His ministers the selemn task of soul-seeking. He requires them to be very diligent and importunate, using a holy compulsion in performance of their mission. "Go quickly," is His command. No time is to be lost. Go everywhere, wherever souls are to be found, in the highways and in the byways. To stimulate them in their going, to make their words hot with consuming to make their words hot with consuming zeal, to awaken the lethargy of those who are in carnal security, He lifts up a warning. The awful fact must be kept in mind that a rejected invitation means a rejected heaven. (Matt. xxv, 46.) Oh, how tamely men preach! How carelessly men hear! How wickedly men procrastinate! How foolishly multitudes refuse Him that speaketh. (Heb. xii, 25.)

Cured Diabetes.

March 14th, 1895. The Dr. J. H. McLean Medicine Co., ST. LOUIS, MO.

GENTLEMEN: I desire to express my heartfelt thanks to you for my marvelous restoration to health. I was sick for many years with a bad case of diabetes which made me very thin and weak. I also suffered much loss of sleep, having to get up so many times at night to pass urine, and also great annoyance from thirst that water would not satisfy. A few months ago began to follow your instructions in regard to diet

Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

It is a grand medicine. I used three bottles, and, thanks be to God, am a well man again. I have not felt so good or taken more interest in life for many years. You are at liberty to publish this if you desire, as I would be glad to be the means of calling the attention to victims of diabetes to a remedy that will give them a LOUIS PHILLIPS,
